proposed answer to the Address of the House of Lords. Account of the debate has afforded him great satisfaction . . . . .	18
273. Sir H. Taylor to Earl Grey, Dec. 9. Has been ordered by the King to invite the Archbishop of Canterbury to the Pavilion . . . . .	18
274. Earl Grey to Sir H. Taylor, Dec. 9. Is glad the King has invited the Archbishop of Canterbury to Brighton. The expression to him of the King's opinion of the importance of settling the Reform question sure to have a good effect. Queen Charlotte's settlement gave power to let houses settled upon her. Question as to whether a similar clause is to be inserted in the Queen's settle- ment . . . . .	19
275. Sir H. Taylor to Earl Grey, Dec. 10. The Queen's settlement not to contain a clause similar to that in Queen Charlotte's. Hopes for good effect from His Majesty's conversation with the Archbishop of Canter- bury. Has been authorised to speak in the same sense to the Bishop of Worcester . . . . .	20
276. Earl Grey to Sir H. Taylor, Dec. 12. The Queen's settlement will be framed as directed. Lord Grey, the Chancellor, and Lord Althorp had met Lords Chandos, Harrowby, and Wharnccliffe, on the Reform Bill. . . . .	21
277. Sir H. Taylor to Earl Grey, Dec. 12. Encloses corre- spondence with Lord Chandos . . . . .	22

281. Earl Grey to Sir H. Taylor, Dec. 14. New Reform Bill well received. Situation of Sir R. Peel with respect to it. Irish Members angry. Lord Grey approves what Sir Herbert had said to Lord Chandos . . . . .	27

282. Sir H. Taylor to Earl Grey, Dec. 15. Remarks on the preceding letter. The King's opinion that Sir R. Peel may look forward to future difficulties in carrying on the Government. His Majesty thinks this a growing evil, and may be a very serious one whoever may be Ministers. The Government ought to be able to command support to a certain extent. Sir Herbert's communications with Lord Chandos . . . . .	29
283. Earl Grey to Sir H. Taylor, Dec. 16. Answer to the above. Owing to abuses not having been corrected in time, the Government has been driven to some inconvenient concessions to public feeling. Why the difficulties may probably be less in a Reformed Parliament . . . . .	32
284. Sir H. Taylor to Earl Grey, Dec. 16. Archbishop of Canterbury's visit to the Pavilion. His interview with the King. His subsequent conversation with Sir Herbert. Objection he expressed to the proposed Metropolitan representation. Had gathered that the King agreed with him about this . . . . .	33
285. Earl Grey to the King, Dec. 16. Discussion in the House of Lords on Irish Tithes, and appointment of a Committee. Similar Committee appointed to the House of Commons . . . . .	35
286. The King to Earl Grey, Dec. 17. Reply to the preceding letter . . . . .	36
287. Sir H. Taylor to Earl Grey, Dec. 17. The discussions in both Houses on Irish Tithes. His Majesty curious as to truth of report that Mr. Sheil is to move an amendment on the Reform Bill, supported by the Irish Members as a body. Nothing further had passed with the Archbishop, who had denied using his influence with the Bishops against the Reform Bill . . . . .	37
288. Earl Grey to Sir H. Taylor, Dec. 17. Hopes the effect of the Archbishop's visit may be good. Only regrets his having been given reason to suppose his objections to the Metropolitan representation are concurred in by the King. Successful debate in the House of Commons. Mr. Macaulay and Mr. Croker. Adjournment of the House of Lords. Tithe affray in Kilkenny . . .	38

289. Sir H. Taylor to Earl Grey, Dec. 18. Remarks on the Archbishop of Canterbury's interview with the King, and the question of Metropolitan representation. The King does not see why this part of the Bill should not be altered in its progress. Close of the debate on the second reading of the Reform Bill in the House of Commons. The King approves the adjournment of the House of Lords. Tithe affray in Ireland. Mr. O'Connell. Probable need of more troops . . .	40
290. Earl Grey to Sir H. Taylor, Dec. 19. Metropolitan representation. The Government may submit to an alteration of this part of the Bill: but danger of this: therefore still fears bad effect from the Archbishop's knowledge of the King's opinion. Anxiety as to future divisions on the Bill in the House of Lords. Mr. O'Connell. Necessity for an arrangement respecting Tithes in Ireland. Provision for the Catholic priesthood indispensable; but opposition that would be provoked by proposing it . . . . .	43
291. Earl Grey to the King, Dec. 19. Debate and division in the House of Commons. Anxiety as to the prospect of passing the Bill through the House of Lords. Wishes to have an opportunity of personally bringing this subject before His Majesty. The King's communication with the Archbishop of Canterbury . . . . .	46
292. The King to Earl Grey, Dec. 22. No excuse was necessary for delay in answering His Majesty's letter. His hopes of good effect on the House of Lords from character and result of the discussion in the House of Commons. Lord Grey's uneasiness about it natural. The King will be glad to receive him, and enter on the consideration of the question. Remarks on his disclosure of his opinion respecting the Metropolitan representation to the Archbishop. Reasons for the Government submitting to an alteration of this part of the Bill. The King sees no reason for desponding as to the success of the Bill. Mr. O'Connell. Irish Tithes. Advantage of providing for Catholic clergy . . . . .	48

293.	Sir H. Taylor to Earl Grey, Dec. 22. The King has taken well Lord Grey's remarks on his disclosure of his opinion to the Archbishop of Canterbury. Sir Herbert entrusted to communicate to the Bishop of Worcester His Majesty's opinion that the Reform Bill ought to be allowed to go into Committee by the House of Lords. Opinions in favour of paying the Roman Catholic clergy in Ireland of George III., the Duke of York, and Mr. Perceval . . . . .	55
294.	Earl Grey to Sir H. Taylor, Dec. 24. His thanks to Sir Herbert and gratitude to the King. Proposes waiting on His Majesty on the 3rd of January. Nothing yet justifies sanguine expectation of a majority in the House of Lords on the second reading of the Reform Bill. Serious question that arises. Provision for the Roman Catholic clergy . . . . .	57
295.	Earl Grey to the King, Dec. 24. Expresses gratitude to His Majesty for his letter. Hoping personally to lay before the King his views on the state of affairs and the Reform Bill, he abstains from any observations except as to the only reasons which would induce him to ask His Majesty to reconsider opinions he has expressed. Metropolitan representation. New difficulties with French Government on Belgian affairs. Remarkable expression of French Minister. He may be really anxious to go out of office. Danger that would follow. . . . .	58
296.	The King to Earl Grey, Dec. 26. Will receive Lord Grey on the 3rd of January. Metropolitan representation. Question as to Belgian fortresses . . . . .	61
297.	Sir H. Taylor to Earl Grey, Dec. 26. The King will be ready to enter into every question Lord Grey may bring before him on the 3rd. Sir Herbert's conversation with the Bishop of Worcester respecting his vote, and that of the other Bishops, on the second reading. Conversation also with Lord Burghersh. Belgian fortresses. Claims of widows of officers of the German Legion . . . . .	63

298. Earl Grey to the King, Dec. 27. Belgian fortresses Representation of London districts . . . . .	65
299. Earl Grey to Sir H. Taylor, Dec. 27. Sir Herbert's conversation with the Bishop of Worcester, and with Lord Burghersh. Intentions of the Opposition. Lord Lyndhurst engaged with them. Their confidence as to the division on the new Bill. Will come to Brighton the 3rd. Widows of officers of German Legion . . . . .	67

1832.

300. Minute, dated Jan. 4, of conversation with the King on the prospect of carrying the Reform Bill through the House of Lords, and the possible necessity of creating Peers to secure it. . . . .	68
301. The King to Earl Grey, Jan. 5, 1832. Lord Grey's minute of his conversation with the King perfectly ac- curate. His Majesty's remarks on the questions sub- mitted for his consideration. His reasons for being prepared, on certain conditions, to create Peers to secure the Reform Bill. The importance His Majesty at- taches to having the assurance of His Ministers that, if Reform is carried, they will resist farther encroach- ments . . . . .	73
302. Minute of Cabinet, Jan. 7. His Majesty's servants ac- knowledge His Majesty's condescending kindness in re- ceiving communication of Earl Grey. Adopt His Majesty's opinion as to the necessity of resisting the establishment of an unconstitutional control over the Government, and defer final opinion on question before them . . . . .	80
303. Earl Grey to Sir H. Taylor, Jan. 8. Deliberation of the Cabinet on his report of his conversation with His Majesty. Determination of Opposition leaders to resist the new Bill as they had resisted the last. Lord Somers will vote for the second reading. Accounts from Ireland. Lists of Peers. Letter to the Arch- bishop of Canterbury respecting a Proclamation for a Fast. A Council necessary. Arrangements for it . . . . .	81

301. Sir H. Taylor to Earl Grey, Jan. 9. The King's remarks on the preceding letter . . . . .	83
305. The King to Earl Grey, Jan. 9. Acknowledges Cabinet Minute, and approves of Ministers having deferred their final opinion . . . . .	85
306. Sir H. Taylor to Earl Grey, Jan. 9. Account of a long conversation with Lord Wharncliffe on the Reform Bill. . . . .	85
307. Earl Grey to Sir H. Taylor, Jan. 10. Acknowledges the King's answer to the Cabinet Minute and two letters of Sir Herbert. Remarks on what had been said by Lord Wharncliffe. Why he ought to allow the Bill to go into Committee. The Government might acquiesce in changes they must oppose. This he cannot say to opponents, and only confidentially to supporters of the Bill . . . . .	90
308. Sir H. Taylor to Earl Grey, Jan. 11. Lord Grey's letter had been satisfactory to the King as confirming his opinion of Lord Grey's reluctance to add to the House of Lords. Sir Herbert will not commit Lord Grey in respect to what has been told him in confidence. The King's conversation with Lord Wharncliffe . . . .	91
